THIS LOOKS GOOD

COUNTY AGENT HELPS STOCKMAN KEEP FEEDING RECORDS.

In many cases, particularly in the West, the stockman has rather stood aloof from extension effort and has considered the county agent as a farm agent. Sometimes he has felt that the county agent not only had nothing of value to him but that his helping the "farm" people was even inimical to his interests as a stockman. This is happily being overcome, though extension effort with livestock is unquestionably more difficult than with farm crops, it being more difficult to make visible results.

County Agent D. C. Dascom, in Larimer County, Colorado, assisted a stockman in his feeding work, as is indicated by the following report:

"Thursday morning, I went to R. G. Maxwell's farm, west of town, and helped him weigh his cattle which had been fed on alfalfa and corn silage since the Stock Show. We found that some of his steers and heifers eighteen months old are now weighing one thousand pounds. One big cow that was sucking a calf weighed sixteen hundred pounds; an eighteen months old bull weighed eleven hundred and seventy pounds. The information which we obtained will be used during the silo campaign this week. It shows the possibility of good corn silage in combination with alfalfa. These animals are in good condition and since the Stock Show have had no corn whatever except that in the silage. In many cases here a three year old steer will not weigh one thousand pounds, whereas, in this case we find that without any extra feed or care an eighteen months old steer weighs a thousand pounds."

Such demonstrations as this are convincing, and multiplying such instances will bring the sympathetic support of the stockmen.
